War Levels All Classes in France

American Correspondent Welcomed at Tavern in Lagny, Where Master and Man, Mistress and Maid Mingled as One Family.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS.

LAGNY, Oct. 29-(By mail to New York).-War, Death's twin brother, is a great leveler of classes. In this part of France, where the war has actually passed, master and man, mistress and maid, mingle as one family.

I am writing this in the only tavern in the place which remains open. I had dinner with the proprietor, his wife, daughter, son, hostler, chambermaid, and cook. And "a good time was had by all." Everybody laughed and cracked jokes at the expense of the Prussians and by the alight of caudles studied maps showing the positions of the fighting armies.

eat an spend the night. And it was laughed to the fond mother's satisfaccold and raining, sleeping out of the Golden Nail (Augerge du Clou river, wasnt it?" the hired man ex-"Come right in, Angleesh," called out the smiling proprietor. "We have demanded. the hotel isn't running, but any Englishman is welcome to what we have. I explained that I was an American. American and English-they are all the same in France," he re-"You've got a fine hospital down in Paris. My oldest son, wounded at the battle of the Marne, is getting well there now." We shook hands. The proprietorwhom everybody addressed as "patron" -called his "patrone," his wife, and we shook hands. Daughter, married but months ago, stepped up and shook hands. Son shook my hand, the hired man shook my hand, and the chambermand and madam's maid shook Then they all smiled hospitably and bade me welcome. And the ce part of it was the genuineness of p-country where the eating was poor was a feast for me. We all sat together at the same table, and there was no table cloth; the linen had all been dden from the Germans, and there had not been time to uncover it. The maid aired her opinions of the "sales Prussians), and the hired man went her households in France just like better. When we reached the ham and eggs three more refugees came ina man, his wife, and little girl, the lat-ter just able to walk and talk.
